Very old cheese

Scientists have analysed a white lump that filled a broken clay jar in the tomb of Ptahmes, who was the mayor of Memphis in the 13th century BC. They say that the lump weighs several hundred grams and seems to be made of a mixture of cow milk and either sheep or goat milk, in other words cheese. The cheese also contains remains of bacteria that cause an infection with fever both in cattle and people. They did not smell the cheese but said that because it was 3,200 years old, they did not think that it smelled of anything. This moves cheese making thousands of years back in time. Archaeologists have found other samples of dairy products earlier, but not solid cheese.

Memphis was the capital of ancient Lower Egypt and the ruins of the city are near the town of Mit Rahina, 20 km south of Giza. They have been preserved together with the pyramids of Giza as a World Heritage Site and an open-air museum.

This is not a joke

Usain Bolt, a famous Jamaican sprinter, who finished his successful athletics career after the 2017 World Championships in London, will join the Australian club Central Coast Mariners. In 2016, he had expressed that it had always been his dream to play professional football. Cricket was the first sport that caught his interest and as a child he admired the Pakistani cricket team. In 2013 Bolt even played basketball in the NBA All-Star Weekend Celebrity Game, but was not very good at it. Bolt arrived in Australia on August 18 and will join the Mariners for an “indefinite training period”. He has earlier trained with Borussia Dortmund in Germany, Sundowns in South Africa and Strømsgodset in Norway. None of these training periods ended with Bolt signing with the club, but they all got a lot publicity. The Mariners tell they are welcoming him with open arms and Bolt says he is very excited about coming to Australia. “This is real. I’ve told the world I want to be a footballer and I know what I can do for the Mariners who are giving me the opportunity to show what I’m capable of.”

Central Coast Mariners Football Club is a professional soccer club in Gosford, a small town in New South Wales with less than 4,000 inhabitants about 76 km from Sydney. The club plays at Central Coast Stadium with 20,000 seats and their supporters are called the Yellow Army because of their colours. The Mariners have won the A-League* Premiership twice and both Championship and Pre-Season Challenge Cup once since the club was formed in 2005. Majority of their players came from no longer existing National Soccer League and it is said that the club usually exceeds most expectations.

The club’s aim is to train Bolt to a professional football player and offer him a professional contract if they succeed. The club’s chief executive told at a press conference that their goal is to be the most innovative, entertaining and community minded sports brand in Australia and that Bolt joining the club to train and hopefully developing into a professional football player corresponds perfectly with the club’s philosophy. He also said that this is a very real football opportunity, not a stunt or a gimmick, the club wants to find out if Bolt can play and continues that the time will tell at what level he is and if he fits the A-league.

Usain Bolt, who turned 32 on 21 August, is an eight-time Olympic gold medallist and holds the world record in the 100 m, 200 m and 4 x 100 m relay. He also holds the title of the fastest man on earth.
